ABSTRACT

A method for inserting an identification modulation code into a printed image. The method has the steps of inserting a start code modulation sequence, followed by the code modulation sequence, and then a stop code

5   modulation sequence. The code is preferably repeated several times throughout the printed image. The modulation sequence can have several levels of subpixel modulation magnitude.